

We are in the process of figuring out how to bring some more happy news into schools up and down the country (as well as internationally!), in the meantime whilst things are a little strange, I wanted to create this free pack for you to use. Whether you're a teacher, carer, parent or sibling I hope this little pack can provide you and those around you with a little bit of happiness.

If you are a school/teacher and would be interested in receiving regular school packs in the future please pop us an email (thehappynewspaper@gmail.com) so we can add you to our contact list and keep you in the loop.

SPRINKLING a tiny BIT of HAPPINESS all over THIS FUNNY OLD PLANET.

Emily Coxhead is a British designer, illustrator and happy thing maker.

In December 2015 she published her own newspaper, 'The Happy News', to remind people that there's a whole lot of good left in the world. Emily has since published her range of colourful greeting cards and products and published her book 'Make Someone Happy' with Penguin Random House. She is continuing to expand all things happy from the world's tiniest, most rainbow-filled office.

The idea of this free pack is to celebrate positive news, acts of kindness and teach children how to be mindful in a fun and colourful way using The Happy Newspaper to inspire and encourage more positive news and changes in our schools and communities.

68-YEAR-OLD WITH ALZHEIMER'S CLIMBS MOUNTAIN EVERY DAY

Remarkable pensioner Sion Jair battled Chronic Fatigue Syndrome and Pernicious Anaemia, only to be diagnosed with Alzheimer's. Determined not to let his diagnosis stop him, he continues to climb his local mountain daily. Sion estimates that he has climbed the Cumbrian mountain around 5,000 times and believes that this regular familiar exercise has helped fight his Pernicious Anaemia and slowed his Alzheimer's progression. He told the Guardian: "I just kept going and my body had two choices: I could either sit down and die, or the body had to get up and use what it had." What a testament to the human spirit!

Courage

The dictionary definition of courage - facing difficulty without fear - doesn't match up to how many of us really feel about courage. Nelson Mandela described courage as "not the absence of fear but the triumph over it"
